Dear Mr. Brand:

In reply to your letter of February 14th, I very much regret that we were called upon to write you in the AHS on February 14th, 1923. We had hoped to appear upon to us under the circumstances.

We have carefully checked up our files and find no letter of resignation earlier than that of December 1, 1922. You had been receiving our publications and we had billed you without response, our third bill being rendered on October 20th, to cover the year 1922. As we are unable to make any exception, unfortunately, to our rules, we must ask that you pay the bill for 1922 that your resignation may be put through in the usual way. We regret very much that you did not return the publications as requested, in which case we should have realized that you desired no longer to affiliate yourself with our Society.

Very truly yours,

I know of no dynasty of which the coins are the only evidence we do however find a few coins with names of rulers, governors or their dates not recorded in history.

I think there are also a few mints not recorded historically.

In the Chinese & Annamese series there are coins not assigned to any known ruler, ruler or usurper.

There are some West China & Central Asian coins of which little or nothing is known of their origin.

There may be some later Roman coins issued by barbarians history does not mention. In the

Dear Sir:

Your letter of June 4th raises a very interesting point. The prominent instance of a country which is practically unknown save for its coins is that of Bactria, and the facts concerning the situation can best be obtained from the British Museum Catalogue of the coins of the Greek Scythic kings of Bactria and India, which I believe you will find in the Library of the University of your town. Perhaps you will obtain enough, however, from Head's 'Historia Numorum', pp. 33ff. Of course, there are a number of cities whose coinage is the only evidence we have of their existence. There are many towns in Spain, in Thrace, where the names of some of the rulers, the so-called dynasts, are the only evidence that we have of their existence. In Paconia there are a number of tribes whose issues alone give evidence of their existence.

In the Mohammedan series, I know of no dynasty of which the coins are the only evidence. We do, however, find a few coins with names of rulers, governors, or their dates, not recorded in history.

I think there are also a few mints not recorded historically. In the Chinese and Annamese series there are coins not assignable to any known ruler, rebel, or usurper. There are some West China and Central Asian coins of the origin of which little or nothing is known.

There may be some later Roman coins issued by personages history does not mention. In the Roman Republican series we find names of moneyers not mentioned in history. I know of no Mediaeval or Modern coins.

Very truly yours,
